THE ROBIN'S EGG BLUE HAS GONE

Historic Tint of Executive Mansion Vanishes Into the Dim Past.

(From Wednesday's Advertiser.)

The famous robin's-egg-blue chamber has faded into the past. The chamber is still there—but the robin's egg blue is gone. It has been wiped out, utterly and literally. And the chamber itself, even, is no longer the office of governors. The chief executive of the Territory of Hawaii has left it. He has migrated, moved, sought other, darker and cooler quarters where there is no robin's egg blue to remind him of another and more strenuous administration.

The famous tint disappeared yesterday, under the vigorous efforts of a gang of workmen who invaded the royal chamber and washed the color from the walls. It had to go—for when the Governor, immediately upon his return from his eastern trip, moved into the quarters heretofore occupied by the secretary of the Territory, and took with him the immense portraits of kings and queens of a by-gone regime, a hideous fast was made apparent. It was literally hideous. The removal of the great portraits disclosed the shocking fact that only a part of the room was robin's egg blue. The rest, that part hidden behind the canvases, was green—and just imagine the combination of grass green and robin's egg blue! It actually hurt the eyes of Secretary Mott-Smith when he entered the chamber to take up his official abode.

Mott-Smith shrieked in agony—and called for men, workmen to remove the hateful contrast. They arrived in squads—and the colors began to fade. Now the room is white, the virgin color of the untinted plaster.

But it is not to remain white. Mott-Smith is considering what tint shall be applied. And there appears to be considerable difference of opinion. The secretary of the Territory wants the room tinted purple; the president of the board of health declares for yellow—the quarantine color; the acting superintendent of public instruction wants the walls left white and the ex-Acting-Governor would like to have a pale blue—not of the robin's egg variety, however, applied.

As if this were not enough—Treasurer Conkling came in and advised old gold, his thoughts since he became the custodian of the territorial funds running largely to gold. Superintendent of Public Works Marston Campbell, running up for a friendly chat, advised that the walls be painted with water from the Nuuanu dam, which would make them a sort of sickly brown. Auditor Fisher stood out for the deepest, darkest blue. He says he is used to blue, as everybody who comes to his office goes away very blue. A representative of an afternoon paper wandered in and insisted that the walls should be painted red, white and blue as the only appropriate color for a governmental chamber. Attorney-General Hemmeyer, who as a lawyer always carries a green bag, was of the opinion that really, don't you know, green would be most appropriate.

Mott-Smith is in despair. He doesn't know what to do. It is possible that he will chance a lottery to see what color shall be applied to the naked walls. Or he may ask Private Secretary McBride to decide.

Meantime, Governor Frear is transacting business in the solemn quiet of a newly but quietly furnished room, the room that used to belong to the secretary. That fine new rug of retiring colors that he purchased in San Francisco has been laid on the floor. The woodwork has been stained a rich mahogany. The ceiling has been toned down with quiet but rich colors. The mellow afternoon sun no longer streams through the windows of the executive chamber.

But the main thing is that the historic robin's egg blue is no more. It has vanished into the unquiet and stranous past.

WILL ELLIS WILL ADVERTISE ISLANDS

Will S. Ellis, the Hawaiian singer, who was for many years manager of one of the best Hawaiian quintet clubs in Honolulu, is now in New York, manager of a Hawaiian singing troupe which is billed at the leading vaudeville houses of New York, Washington, Philadelphia, Boston and other eastern cities. Mr. Ellis has written the promotion committee that he is doing well.

In return for some courtesies given him by the promotion committee, Ellis has pointed out a way where he can be of service to the committee, and at the same time his own advertising will be given a boost.

He states that a large group picture of himself and troupe is displayed in each of the hotel lobbies and at other public places where thousands of passersby have an opportunity to take notice. He asks that the promotion committee get up at least two frames of large photographs showing Waikiki, Pearl Harbor, the Volcano and a few other Honolulu scenes, in which his own troupe picture will be centered and these two frames will be displayed in the principal hotels of each city while his troupe is playing there. He believes this will be of value to promotion work, as he states that the pictures of the Hawaiian singing boys never fail to attract general attention.

Acting-Secretary Cooper will present Mr. Ellis' proposition to the committee at its next regular meeting.

A REMEDY FOR GROUP THAT IS ABSOLUTELY RAPE

Grop is the most prevalent during the dry cold weather of the early winter months. Parents of young children should be prepared for it. All that is needed is a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Many mothers are never without it in their homes. It is not only a safe and hygienic medicine but the best in use for coughs, colds and sneezes. For sale by all dealers.
